Gettis, S., Bayona, P., & Rodriguez, R. (2018). Construction and Usage-Based Instruction: Teaching Students to Orally Communicate in a Foreign Language. International Journal of Education and Human Developments, 4(2), 51–72. This article focuses on an intra-institutional case study developed in Lewis University and North Central College, where a new Spanish teaching method has been tested. This method focuses on oral performance, and conceives language as a set of constructions that combine in strings of sentences, and develops linguistic competence based on contextualization. It challenges the traditional grammar-focused methodologies, that intend to build linguistic competence out of isolated lexica. Results of this case study indicate that our proposed system develops intermediate oral proficiency in half the time as compared with traditional methods.
