Anthropology, B.A.

From its perspective, anthropology offers insights into the study of humankind, in all its conditions. Such a broad and ambitious goal requires a unique configuration of perspectives. Thus, anthropology is holistic and comparative; is evolutionary or historical; seeks to complement scientific, humanistic and cultural insider's views; and is based on experiential learning. Most anthropologists are trained in four commonly conceptualized sub disciplines: cultural anthropology, biological anthropology, archaeology and linguistic anthropology. While study in all four of these sub-disciplines is available at North Central College, the strength of the department is centered in cultural anthropology.
