Neuroscience minor, Marie Butnariu, says:

“There were seven other "strangers" on a day trip I took to Cascade d’Ouzoud in Morocco. We had conversations that forever have changed me. From our conversations about human trafficking, politics, gender equality, poverty, relationship values, potential, family and education--I vowed to myself that day that I will forever live a life of experiencing what my fellow global family experience daily--a life filled with travel and wanderlust.”

Marie studied abroad at the University of Glasgow in Scotland during fall 2014.

Benefits of studying neuroscience abroad:

- Access to professors and resources in neuroscience that are different than that at NCC
- Immerse yourself in another culture where you can compare the knowledge and behavior of the locals to those in the United States
- Science is becoming increasingly global. There is a growing demand for professionals who can work effectively in an international setting
- Complete a Richter and do research abroad
- Take unique courses that are not offered at NCC
- Courses are taught in English
- Keep your NCC-based financial aid
- Take 12-15 NCC credits each term
- Travel and explore new places
