The Course (GLS 362-D3: Study Abroad in Italy)

At its core, this course is an advanced introduction to Italian art and art history. The main goal of our 12-day study tour is to bring students in contact with the perhaps unparalleled wealth of sculpture, painting and architecture in central Italy. The course is interdisciplinary: It is team-taught by faculty from the departments of art and modern and classical languages. It will approach its subject with questions arising from the academic fields of art, art history and classical studies. Special topics covered will include some drawn from the discipline of art, such as design principles and the role of the Academy in Italian artistic traditions; some from classical studies and related fields of ancient history and archaeology; and others, such as international and intercultural controversies relating to preservation of Italian cultural heritage and to the learning outcomes for North Central College's ACR Intercultural Seminar.
